Is Your Child's Inheritance at Risk?

For many years, the most common way of leaving assets to adult children and other loved ones has been through an outright distribution. For example, upon the death of both Husband and Wife, their child inherits the estate outright and all of the parents' assets are retitled directly in that child's name (the home, the bank accounts, the investments, etc.) This is the simplest way to leave assets to loved ones and, as a result, the vast majority of living trusts provide for this type of outright distribution. But this manner of distribution has three main disadvantages:

- 1. Risk of Creditors: when your child inherits your estate outright, the assets are titled in his or her name directly. Therefore, if your child is sued or has creditors, the assets that they have inherited from you become subject to judgment liens and creditor claims.
- 2. Risk of Divorce: when your child inherits your estate outright, it becomes very easy for them to commingle the assets with their spouse and, in the event of a divorce, a significant portion of the assets that your child has inherited from you may be lost to their spouse in a divorce.
- 3. Risk of Assets Passing Outside the Family: when your child inherits your estate outright, you no longer have control over what happens to those assets when your child later passes away. And under California law, if your child passes away without a living trust or will, their spouse will be entitled to a significant portion of the assets that your child has inherited from you; therefore, if your child passes away, the assets they inherited from you will NOT go entirely to your grandkids – instead those assets will pass in part or entirely to your son-in-law or daughter-in-law, thereby passing outside the family.

After undergoing countless hours of legal education, we introduce to our clients a new method for leaving your assets to your loved ones. Through the use of a Multi-Generational Trust, we can now protect the assets from creditors, divorce, and from passing outside of the family. The Multi-Generational Trust allows your beneficiaries to be in full control of their inheritance while affording them maximum protection from the disadvantages explained above. However, in order to afford this protection to your children, your trust must be reviewed and amended during your lifetime in order to include the appropriate provisions that would protect the assets for your children after you have passed away. We are currently offering a complimentary review of your estate plan and encourage you to call us as soon as possible at (714) 282-7488 to see how we could protect the future of your loved ones.

Employee Appreciation: Meet Gilbert Traylor

Gilbert Traylor is our Client Relations Specialist, as well as the newest member of our team. Many of you may have already had the opportunity to speak with Gilbert as he regularly reaches out to clients with important updates and schedules appointments for clients with the attorneys to make sure that they have their estate plan in order. Thereafter, he personally served President Lyndon B. Johnson through his service on Marine Helicopter Squadron One (which is responsible for the transportation of the President and Vice President through Marine Corp helicopters). We would like to thank Gilbert for all of his hard work!

The Recent U.S. Supreme Court Decision: How It Affects Your Loved Ones

Breaking news! The Supreme Court case of Clark v. Rameker is changing the world of estate planning and financial/retirement planning. Do you have retirement accounts? If yes, then you must learn the ramifications of this crucial case.

In June, 2014, the Court held that when a beneficiary receives funds in the form of an inherited IRA those funds are NOT considered “retirement funds” and, thus, the funds are available for creditor collection in a debtor’s bankruptcy estate. This ruling changes the long standing laws that used to protect inherited IRAs from creditors.

Planning opportunities still remain if you want to protect your IRA beneficiaries from creditors and other predators. The solution is an Individual Retirement Account Trust (“IRA trust”). The IRA trust allows for the stretching of your IRA over the life-time of the beneficiary and it protects against bankruptcy, lawsuits, creditor claims, divorce and mismanagement of assets. Establishing an IRA trust today is more important than ever! If you want to learn about your planning opportunities, please contact us (714) 282-7488 and we will be happy to answer any questions you may have.

Your Living Trust May Be Outdated

On January 2, 2013, President Obama signed into law the American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012 (ATRA). This law created “permanency” in the estate planning area for the first time in over a decade. As a result, we now have a much clearer idea as to whether a client’s estate will be subject to estate tax (also known as the “death tax”) after they pass away. However, prior to this law being passed, the uncertainty of the estate tax laws required most married couples to establish a sophisticated (and often complicated) type of trust known as an AB trust. An AB trust requires that the surviving spouse divide the estate into two trusts after the first spouse passes away. Moreover, the surviving spouse has to maintain two separate trusts for the remainder of his or her lifetime, as well as file an additional tax return each year. Ultimately, an AB trust could result in unnecessary headaches and expenses.

From the time that the tax laws became permanent, we have literally updated hundreds of clients’ trusts in order to make their estate plan simpler and avoid the complexities of the AB Trust. However, there are still many clients who have neglected to have their estate plan reviewed despite the changes in the law. We are currently offering a review of your estate plan by an experienced attorney to make sure that it is up to date. Take advantage of the complimentary review by calling The Law Office of James F. Roberts & Associates at (714) 282-7488. Additionally, we understand that other estate planning firms are not as proactive as we are about keeping clients informed of changes in the law; therefore, if you have a friend or relative who has a trust that was not prepared by our office, we encourage them to call our office for a complimentary review of their estate plan as well.

Jim's Memo

This newsletter may be the most important newsletter to date. In this issue we will be discussing a very recent United States Supreme Court case that can have significant impact on your beneficiaries when they inherit your Individual Retirement Account ("IRA") or other qualified plans. If you have an IRA, read the article on page 2 regarding the U.S. Supreme Court decision to understand how your loved ones may be affected. Additionally, if you are concerned (as many of our clients are) about protecting your children from lawsuits and divorce, the article on page 1 entitled "Is Your Child's Inheritance At Risk?" will provide you with a solution that addresses these concerns.

Estate planning, among other things, is about providing for and protecting our loved ones by designing a master plan for our assets when we leave this world. However, planning for the present is just as important as planning for the future; we should never lose sight of the importance of spending time with family and loved ones during our short time here. Recently, my wife Gayle and our two adult children, Dustin and Diana, embarked on a three week road trip around the United States. We went as far north as North Dakota, as far east as Washington D.C. and as far South as New Orleans. Our trip covered 25 states and it ended with many memorable and wonderful experiences. On the last leg of our journey, while driving from Yuma, Arizona to our home in Orange County, California, our daughter was on the phone booking our next family vacation. Take time to enjoy your loved ones...

A Little Humor: "Brave Patient"

The Smiths were shown into the dentist's office, where Mr. Smith made it clear that he didn't want to spend a lot of money. "No fancy stuff, Doctor," he ordered, "No gas or needles or any of that stuff. Just pull the tooth and get it over with." "I wish more of my patients were as brave as you," said the dentist admiringly. "Now, which tooth is it?" Mr. Smith turned to his wife... "Show him your tooth, honey!"
